

Better Connections

By Glenn Sharp

A well thought out and effectively targeted campaign not only creates a better connection, it can even help redefine a brand or open up new markets. Research conducted by APPA shows that the current generation of consumers appreciates promotional products more than any generation before because they offer a tangible value-add to their purchasing experience. A message passes from the brand to the consumer that says: "We are rewarding your brand loyalty. Thank you!"

Recent research supports this:

- 75 percent of human resource managers surveyed are using promotional products in recognition programmes
- 72 percent of marketing and HR managers say promotional products are very effective in motivation and retention of staff
- 100 percent of advertisers said adding a promotional product returned a favourable response to their campaign
- 69 percent of advertisers said promotional products increased brand interest
- 84 percent of advertisers said promotional products created more favourable impressions of the brand itself.
