PERTH AIRPORT

RUNWAY MAINTENANCE AND GROOVING WORKS

What you need to know about the second phase of runway maintenance and grooving works at Perth Airport

Why: In February 2010 we commenced essential runway works, which must be carried out every 15 to 20 years to ensure the ongoing safety of the runway system.

What: A second phase called surface grooving is now required, which involves cutting grooves in the runway to allow rain water to drain away. Residents in suburbs close to the approach and departure of the cross runway may notice a change in aircraft movements.

When: The works are currently underway until 28 May, Monday to Saturday from 9.00am-8.00pm. No works will take place in the evenings or on Sundays.

These works are for a limited time only and are not an indication of future plans for the ongoing use of the runways, or amended flight paths.

Compelling: TJ (Dean Daley-Jones) and Douglas Macale in Mad Bastards.

Outback reality check

MAD BASTARDS (MA15+)
Directed by: Brendan Fletcher
Starring: Dean Daley-Jones, Lucas Yeeda, Ngairé Pigram
Screening: From May 5
Reviewer: Emilia Vranjes
 ★★★★★ 1/2

A COUPLE of years ago, Australian singer-songwriter Alex Lloyd casually mentioned to me in an interview that he was due to "head north" to help compose the soundtrack for a WA film called Mad Bastards.

I now wonder whether Lloyd could have foreseen the cinematic significance of the work, which would go on to become the only WA film to feature at the Sundance Film Festival – and to critical acclaim, no less.

Perhaps of greater note is its cultural significance – a powerful piece of local filmmaking with compelling characters that gives a strong voice to indigenous West Australians and their stories.

Director Brendan Fletcher, making his feature film debut, delivers an at once confronting yet heart-warming narrative of the "real Australia" – the fact the cast comprises mostly non-professionals only serves to strengthen its authenticity.

Protagonist Dean Daley-

Jones makes his screen debut (he previously worked as a grip on film sets) and turns in one of the most transfixing Australian performances in recent memory. Likewise, Greg Tait impresses as a Kimberley police officer, who hosts a local men's group (Tait turned to his own life experiences for the role).

Fletcher bravely handles taboo social issues, including alcoholism, male violence and absentee parents, in what is essentially a father-son story played out in our ruggedly beautiful outback.

Mad Bastards represents a triumph in contemporary Australian storytelling.

BUSINESS

Sherryn McBride's business acumen was recently recognised by Management Today magazine. d354089

Self-starter in mix

A SUCCESSFUL and self-made woman for most of her life, Shelley resident Sherryn McBride wears a number of hats: as freelance marketing consultant, copywriter, e-book author and industry trainer.

Moreover, as a mature woman, Ms McBride would never have dreamt adding magazine cover girl and centrefold to her repertoire – yet she can rightfully boast that accomplishment, after she was nominated as one of Management Today magazine's Top 20 Women with Entrepreneurial Spirit recently.

Drawing from 25 years experience in managing national corporations and consultancies, Ms McBride runs highly profitable marketing business Marketing Talk from her own home.

When asked where her entrepreneurial spirit stemmed from, Ms McBride named a number of factors, starting with the drive and determination of her clients.

"My clients are very entrepreneurial and if I can help them make their business more marketable and they are open to new ideas, then that to me is more important than being entrepreneurial myself," she said.

"Taking new ideas out of the box is the most fun of all."

Another factor in Ms McBride's achievements were the all-important influences she grew up with, which probably helped pave her thriving future before she was even born.

"I am sure my independent nature stems from growing up surrounded by determined women," Ms McBride, a third-generation trailblazer in her family, said.
